Lieuten-ant-Commander Murin saw the danger and immediately ordered the men to leave the fireroom. The cause of the leak in the fireroom. The cause of the leak in the apparatus and the reason for the ignition of the escaping oil was not ascertained by the board. The three coal passers who lost their lives in the accident were unable to escape because the flames barred the exit. Discipline on the battle-ship after the accident, the report added, was excellent. The most important finding of the board was as follows:

"The accident was due to the errorfeous principle and design of the installation of the system of burning oil fuel."

In view of this finding it is likely that there will be a complete study of the oil fuel system and that the design of the apparatus will be modified and improved so as to prevent future accidents of this nature. Officers of the battle passers.

The question as to whether the increase of the district superintendents' salaries should be included in the budget or held over until the board acquired sufficient funds to grant the $26,000 expenditure precipitated a verbal contest which split the board into two factions. Those who advocated the inclusion of the increase in the budget were headed by Patrick J. McGowan, former President of the Board of Aldermen, and Supt William H. Max- ers and not to be had elsewell. The dissenters were led by John Greene, vice-president of the Board of Education, and Nicholas J. Barrett, chairman of the committee on supplies Following a series of heated arguments the resolution was put to a vote and passed 17 to 12.

Mr. McGowan declared in behalf of he amendment that the salaries of not only the district superiatendents, but of
